

THE MIFFLINBURG BUGGY MUSEUM 2023 MEMBERSHIP APPEAL

From 1845 to 1929, Mifflinburg was home to more than seventy-five independent carriage makers. By the end of the 19th century, the town had earned the nickname, “Buggy Town” for producing as many as 5,000 horse-drawn vehicles annually. Today, only one factory remains to tell the story of “Buggy Town,” the factory of William A. Heiss.

The Mifflinburg Buggy Museum now preserves the only intact, authentic carriage factory open to the public in the United States. In addition, the museum complex includes the Heiss family home, a reconstructed carriage house, the Repository or showroom and the Snyder Education and Visitors Center.

Your membership will help us preserve this important part of the American transportation history. Help us to continue telling the story of “Buggy Town” by becoming a member or renewing your membership today. With our thanks, your benefits include:
